Consent Form

In this study, you will be asked to fill out a number of questionnaires.

The benefits you may expect from participating in this study are as follows: financial compensation of 1.50 U.S. dollar and an opportunity to contribute to scientific research. The principal investigator does not foresee any important risks regarding your involvement in this study.

By giving your consent to participate in this study, you will participate in a study in which you will complete some questionnaires and problem-solving tests. The study will take approximately 10 minutes.

Your participation in the study is entirely voluntary. You may choose not to participate or may withdraw from this study at any time without penalty. You can skip any question that you do not feel comfortable answering.

The information you will provide about yourself will be completely anonymous and confidential. Only the principal investigator will be able to view your responses. Immediately after receiving your responses, the principal investigator will delete any potentially identifiable information from your data (such as your Prolific ID). Therefore, your responses will not be associated with your name or any other identifying information. Only averages and general trends among variables will be shown in publications.

If you have any other questions or concerns, you can address them to the principal investigator: Stéphane Côté, Professor of Organizational Behavior (scote@rotman.utoronto.ca).

If the preceding information is clear to you, please indicate that you understand your rights as a participant and give your consent to participate in these studies below.

You must select 2 boxes below to continue to the next page.

currentSESladder This ladder represents where people currently stand in your local community. At the top of the ladder are the people who are the most well off, those who have the most money, most education, and best jobs. At the bottom are the people who are the worst off, those who have the least money, least education, and worst jobs or no jobs.

Between 1 (bottom) and 10 (top), where do you think you currently stand on the ladder in general? Please click on the number next to the ladder that best represents your current position.

The number you click will become highlighted in green. If you wish to change your choice, simply click the number again so that it is no longer highlighted and then choose a new number.

Think of this ladder as representing where people stand in their communities.

People define community in different ways; please define it in whatever way is most meaningful to you. At the top of the ladder are the people who are the most well off in society. At the bottom are the people who are the worst off in society.

Where would you place yourself on this ladder?

debriefing Debriefing Information

Thank you for participating in this study! Your participation in a study like this contributes to the scientific research, and we are very grateful for your involvement. Now that you have completed the study, we can fully debrief you about the purpose of this study.

Social class includes both objective (income, education, and occupational prestige) and subjective (perceptions of rank vis-à-vis others) aspects. Recent research has uncovered a pattern of psychological correlates of social class, so that high social class is associated with less social engagement; less prosocial behavior; reduced empathic accuracy; and a stronger desire to be unique. Economic inequality reflects the degree to which wealth is concentrated in the hands of the few vs. the many. Recent research has also found that economic inequality shapes individual behavior and that these effects differ for individuals with higher vs. lower social standing (Côté, House, & Willer, 2015; Nishi, Shirado, Rand, & Christakis, 2015). In particular, higher inequality reduces the prosocial behavior of the wealthy; in these studies however inequality was not related to the prosocial behavior of lower-incomes individuals. The goal of this research is therefore to increase the understanding of why social class and economic inequality exert these effects and to examine whether the effects extend to the related outcomes of ethical decision-making and moral judgment.

Various mechanisms may explain why social class and economic inequality have the psychological effects described above. Theoretically, these mechanisms are posited to originate in the tendency of higher social class individual to control resources and to pay less attention to the context around them (Kraus, Piff, & Keltner, 2009). In this research the relationship between economic inequality and social class with the various factors, as well as examine possible mechanisms will be tested. Relationships and mechanisms of interest include: a) support for redistribution policies, b) perceived upward mobility, c) moral views and stereotypes of the poor, d) anti-government views, e) level of individualism, f) racial diversity and perceptions of white privilege as well as racial discrimination, g) political orientation, h) political engagement and behaviors, i) meritocratic beliefs, j) various judgments and perceptions regarding inequality and k) social comparison.

In this study, you completed measures of social class or manipulations of social class/economic inequality mindsets. You also completed questionnaires meant to measure the mechanisms and outcomes described. We are interested in whether your social class or social class/economic inequality mindset is associated with how you think about the world and how you think about others.

If you have any other questions or concerns, you can address them to the principal investigators: Stéphane Côté, Professor of Organizational Behavior and Psychology (scote@rotman.utoronto.ca). If you are interested in reading a paper on this topic, please see: <http://www-2.rotman.utoronto.ca/facbios/file/ROBSocialClass.pdf>

Thanks again for your participation in our research!
